

Looking back on over two decades as a lay missionary, Bessie Black is amazed at how God prepared her for that service in lessons stretching back to childhood. In Once Again Upon an Island, Bessie tells about those lessons and how they were applied in Papua New Guinea, Fiji Islands, and other places her life journey has taken her.

Bessie Black and her husband Bob are retired missionaries, having served in two state-side missions assignments then eighteen years in Papua New Guinea, Fiji Islands, and Solomon Islands as overseas missionaries for the Church of the Nazarene, twenty-five years in all. They have now retired to Rogers, Arkansas.

Once Again Upon An Island

Bessie Black

Again

Once Upon An Island

Stories of a Lay Missionary

Papua New Guinea

Port Moresby

Bessie Black